THE GENERAL INTENTION
Recommended by His Holiness,
Pius X.

The intention this month is one that should appeal strongly to all those devoted to the league, since lukewarmness is so often the cause of a soul that was once alive with love for the Heart of Christ. In a certain sense, it is a poison of the spiritual system that may enter into the life not only of those of the world, but of those specially consecrated to God. How may it be recognized? By the disposition of the will towards the things of Christ. When a lukewarmness is felt to the actual fulfillment of one's spiritual duties, when dryness and distraction are found in prayer, even when, through weakness, there are occasional lapses into mortal sin, none of these necessarily means that lukewarmness has set in. It is not a matter of feeling, but a certain stagnation of the will. Morning or evening prayers are omitted or said with unfeeling indifference; the sacraments are received in routine; little duties are despised, small good is given to the groundings of grace; venial sin is made light of, and all the while the will has no desire to lead the soul to greater heights or back to the fervor of other days. It wants to be left alone, and go the easy path. Such is the lukewarm soul. Is there any wonder that God should have said of it, "I would thou wert cold or hot. But because thou art lukewarm, thou shalt be vomited out of my mouth." (Apoc. III, 15-16). It makes a pretext of friendship with Christ where there is little more than formality. It can be a slight upon the gifts that enter His Heart's best blood; it is like offering cold words to the sick when it is our power to lessen anguish of mind of staunch a bleeding wound.

For such are we to offer our prayers and good works during this month, that God may strengthen their wills and enkindle in their hearts the fire which He came to send upon earth, and that the great truths may come home to them in all their eternal fullness, and that they may be blessed with per-

PROUD IN HER POVERTY.

Young Woman's Brave Answer to Insulting Landlord.

Frank P. Sargent, the United States commissioner of Immigration, said one day in Washington:

"There is fine stuff in some of these poor people who come to our shores. I heard recently of a young Swedish woman. Brave, witty and honorable, she could bring such a young American into the world. A short time after she arrived among us, her husband got out of work. Naturally, then the rent fell behind. The landlord called for it one day in her husband's absence. He listened to the young woman's tale of misfortune, regarding the while her yellow hair, her clear blue eyes, her red mouth and white teeth. Suddenly, bending toward her, he said:

"Give us a kiss, and her blue eyes, as cold as ice, dwell on him disdainfully.

"No," she said, "my husband and I may be too poor to pay our rent, but we are not so poor that we can't do our own kissing."

THE PASSAGE.

Many a year is in its grave
Since I crossed the restless wave;
And the evening, fairer form,
Shines on ruin, rock and river.

Then in this same boat beside
Sat two comrades old and tried—
One with all the life of youth,
One with all the fire of youth.

One on earth in silence wrought,
And his grave in silence sought;
But the father, brighter form,
Passed in battle and in storm.

So, whenever I turn mine eye
Back upon the days gone by,
Saddening thoughts of friends come
Over me.

Friends that closed their course before
Me,
But that soul with soul can blend?
Soul like were those hours of yore,
Let us walk in soul once more.

Take, O boomerang, thrice thy fee,
Take, I give it willingly;
For, invisible to thee,
Spirits twain have crossed with me.

To Avoid Sunstroke.

(From the New York Herald.)
The main means to such an end is skin evaporation. When this is interfered with in any way there is trouble. In sunstroke, for instance, there is always a hot and dry skin. How can we make the most of our cooling capabilities and humor them to their fullest extent?

If we perspire freely we take the first step. To keep the skin clear, clean, transpirable and alertly responsive to changes is of prime importance. Light outer garments, cool bathing, fanning breezes, shady retreats, cold, bland drinks and light foods all help to maintain the equilibrium between the inside and outside body. These sound simple enough on general principles, but how few think of applying them properly.

The thoughtful one will load his thermal furnace with the same fuel he uses in the coldest weather, and open his flues the wider, that it may burn the more fiercely. What he should be doing is to keep his flues closed, to keep the heat directly hindering. With overloaded stomach, necessarily embarrassed digestion, weakened heart, brain overstimulated with alcohol and with the general debility that follows in the train, he is in the worst possible condition to resist high temperature. In any shape, is it any wonder that such individuals are almost invariably stricken?

severance, through the spirit of mortification and of prayer. And for those among them who may reap no profit from our prayers in their behalf we may, in the true spirit of the League, make generous reparation to the Heart that never abates in its love for sinner and sinner.

MANAGER QUIGLEY'S RETURN.

Reports a Shortage of Workmen in Nearly All Lines.

Manager C. A. Quigley of the Studebaker company has returned from an absence of several weeks in the east. He reports it is simply impossible for manufacturers to fill their orders with any degree of promptness, particularly in the lines of manufacture in which the Studebakers are engaged. At the South Bend factories there are usually 2,500 hands employed, but there is a constant shortage of 300 to 500 hands owing to competing concerns enticing their employes away, with offers of better pay. The Studebakers are very short at present of trimmers, so that agents are being sent all over to pick up workmen in this special line where they can be found. Mr. Quigley stated his belief that the Missouri valley farmers will not be able to harvest their crops owing to the shortage in help.

TALKS ABOUT CONTACT.

A. J. Tarbet Is Confident It Will Make Another Butte.

A. J. Tarbet is down from the Contact copper camp in the northern part of Elko county, Nevada, and has expressed considerable enthusiasm over that country. In fact, he believes the region will make a second Butte. Mr. Tarbet brings the information that surveys have been completed for a railroad from Twin Falls to southern Idaho on through to Elko; that the distance from the former to Contact is seventy-five miles and from Contact to Elko it is about sixty miles. Just when the railroad will be built is uncertain, but in view of the importance of recent developments Mr. Tarbet is of the opinion that it will not be delayed very long.

"The camp of Contact is today just exactly what Butte was in 1880," says Mr. Tarbet. "Its ores are very similar to those of Butte, and there is everything to justify the belief that it will make another Butte. All it now needs is a shaft of two or three thousand feet. There is a great contact lode there which stretches over twenty miles of country in the form of a horseshoe. Inside the horseshoe is granite and porphyry, and outside it is lime. Cutting the granite and porphyry dykes there is a system of true fissure veins, all of which are loaded with copper, silver and gold. The low-grade ore carries 10 per cent copper and from that up. An average of samples taken from sixteen claims by me gave returns of 16 per cent copper and some gold and silver. Some of the ore of the camp is worth as much as $500 a ton, and considerable high-grade rock is now being hauled out of the district by team to Wells."

TRADITION OF THE ROSE.

Pretty Legend Current Among North American Indians.

The North American Indians of the western world have a tradition that roses were created without thorns. So tall and fair they grew that all creatures were attracted by their beauty and grace. Animals that browse upon grass and green herbage soon discovered the sweet fragrance of the roses' abundant foliage, and then every rose tree holding its flowers aloft but attracted attention and drew destruction to itself.

Every part of the earth had been given its glory of roses, but in every place there were animals which sought the bushes to devour them, and tribes of roses were in danger of becoming extinct. In their extremity they held a council, for in that faraway morning of the world plants as well as animals had power to speak. To the council all the roses came, and each had a tale to tell of suffering and disaster. At length it was decided to send for help to the godman of the tribes—the Hlawa of the west. Delegates were chosen from among those who were maimed and torn and had suffered most. Others were sent who were tall and fair and graceful. Wisely this council discerned that should justice be denied the tribes, beauty might prevail in their cause.

The conference was long and grave. At its close an armory of thorns was given to every rose, and thus were the tribes of roses delivered from the enemies—Circle Magazine.

Pie and Goodness.

(From the Washington Post.)
But the good man who partakes of a luscious, well prepared, carefully cooked pie is certain to be twice blessed. He turns to the contemplation of worthy and benevolent objects and desires, and strives to make others share the joy that pervades his bosom. The heavens are bright above him, the little birds carol before him, and behind him are the shining faces of orphans upon whom he has bestowed peace as he has found it in his life.

The forces of darkness gnash their teeth in baffled fury in contemplating such a man. They cannot grapple with him. There is nothing terrible about him. From top to toe he walks the coat of mail of happiness. He may not know why he is so fortunate, but if he should happen to think of the pie he has eaten his thoughts will be bland and mild with grateful inclination toward the woman who fashioned and effected his content.

Just a Prudent Brake.

(From the New York Herald.)
The country is all right. It was going ahead at a little too fast, and there was speculation and panic, and a drastic reduction in the market value of those "highly decorated pieces of paper" in Wall street have put on the brakes without interfering with the development in the country's prosperity.

Teddy Bears and Pug Dogs.

(From the Kansas City Journal.)
The Michigan legislature who is alarmed to see little girls with Teddy bears instead of dolls should calm himself. Teddy bears in the arms of little girls don't indicate race suicide half so much as pug dogs in the arms of married women.

No Inducements.

In response to Kansas' call for 50,000 harvest hands she has secured 118. The news that the brewers have been driven out of Kansas seems to have traveled far and wide.

SEEKING "MISSING LINK."

Mrs. Selenka Goes to Java to Resume Her Husband's Work.

(Los Angeles Times.)
London, July 17.—Mrs. Leonidas Hubbard, the intrepid little Canadian woman who, in the wilds of Labrador, completed the work left unfinished by the death of her husband, has a rival for similar fame. Mrs. Margaret Selenka is going to the island of Java to try to find traces of the "missing link" for which her husband, the late Emil Selenka, had made a laborious search before his death in Munich three years ago.

It is well known in scientific circles that more than ten years ago, the Dutch medical man, Eugen Dubois, found fossilized remains on the shores of the Solo river, in Trinil, Java, which he names the "Pithecanthropus erectus," and which he firmly believed to be the "missing link" between man and monkey. A lively controversy was waged over the matter in which learned men took opposing sides. Professor Virchow being among those who assailed the theories of Dubois.

Professor Selenka, who was an eminent zoologist, sided with Dubois. Mrs. Selenka had often assisted her husband in his researches and expeditions to the Dutch Indies. She knows that part of the work and its inhabitants well and decided some time ago to proceed with the hunt for the missing link. The Dutch government has promised Mrs. Selenka substantial help and aid in every way. They supplied a great number of knifes are put at her disposal and all government employes in the region of Madelon, where Trinil is situated, are instructed to help her expedition in all respects.

A private letter was received in Eureka last week from M. P. Murphy at Salt Lake, stating that his wife, Mrs. Mary A. Murphy, had died in that city July 19, and he would have the body transported to Eureka for burial. The many friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy in Eureka were surprised when this information was given out, as it was believed they were living at Dewey, Ida., where they removed from here place her in years ago. Tuesday's train brought the body to Eureka and the funeral took place that afternoon. Interment being made in the Catholic cemetery. Rev. Father McGarry officiated. Mrs. Murphy, who accompanied the body to Eureka, we learn the following particulars regarding her sickness and death: She was taken ill about a year ago when she was in the city of Salt Lake. A widow and child, she was suffering from a kidney trouble, and after great suffering for eleven months, and finding no relief, he decided to take his wife to Salt Lake for medical treatment. There, he did about three weeks ago. The physicians in that institution decided that an operation was necessary. Accordingly, performed one, when it was discovered that she was suffering from an abscess of the left kidney. The disease had advanced to such a stage that the operation was not successful, and she died shortly after it.

Mrs. Murphy, before her death, requested her husband to have her body buried beside that of her son, James J. Byrne, who died here in 1882. Besides her husband, she was survived by her son, Edward Byrne, now living at Columbia, Neb., and her daughter, Deceased was a native of New York, aged 55 years 2 months and 14 days.

TERrible MAFIA SOCIETY.
Most Powerful Secret Organization in the World.

Undoubtedly the most powerful and terrible secret organization in the world is the Mafia, which flourishes in Italy, and has done so for more than 300 years. It was founded in Sicily for protection against the injustice of foreign rulers, but it has since become a people of all classes and all religions, and its operations are not confined to any particular object except the gain of all the members.

He who is of the Mafia is almost sure to do well, and may even escape justice after committing the most serious crimes. It is said that the secret of the success of the famous Crispi was that he was one of the Mafia. If a member opens a business, he is given round and all the other members in the neighborhood flock to it with their custom; if one of the Mafia, and they are called, is put up for election to the office of mayor, he is set to work in every direction in his favor; if one commits a crime he may be let off because the judge and jury are his brothers; and not long since a man murdered another in the streets of Palermo and was caught the next moment, but he broke away from his captors, and upon the instant the cry of "Mafiosi" was sent round, and every possible impediment was put in the way of the pursuit, so that the murderer and the man got away. Subsequently the police discovered his whereabouts, but they dared not arrest him, for fear of the Mafia.

The society will allow any of its members to behave dishonestly or criminally toward any other man who is not a member. Of course, not being established for the purpose of committing crime, it does not encourage such acts, but when they have been committed, it will do its level best to shield the perpetrators from the consequences.

But should a Mafiosi at any time do badly toward another, or in any way whatever fail in his duty to the fraternity, he may be sure that the penalty of death awaits him at a very early date. The Mafia never fails in exacting that penalty, and many of the quiet, undiscovered murders that are constantly taking place all over Italy are to be attributed to this cause. The Mafia is the most faithful friend and the most terrible enemy.

It is not an easy thing to join the Mafia, and the tests as to whether a candidate is fit for the fraternity and likely to be a good member of it are very strict. He must first pass through many probationary trials, but when the committee are satisfied that he is a good candidate, he is duly initiated. The candidate has then to go through a terrible ceremony.

First of all a cut is made in his body and a quantity of blood is drawn from it, and with this he smears an image of his favorite saint and then sets the image on fire, immediately taking the oath in the following words: "I swear on my honor to be faithful to the brotherhood. As this saint and the drops of my blood are destroyed, so will I shed all the blood I have for the fraternity, and I will not allow this blood can never be restored to me, so can I never again become free from the brotherhood."

Then the new initiate has to draw a revolver and shoot at a crucifix, to show that he would be willing to shed the blood of his nearest relation or most intimate friend if commanded to do so. He is then a full member, and he is said to be a wearer of the "red mantle."

His name as a member is not entered in any books, but it is duly forwarded to the headquarters, and then it is communicated by word of mouth to all the other members in the district where he lives. These other members reach him all the other signs and customs of the fraternity which it is necessary he should know, and he at once becomes an active member.

The headquarters of the brotherhood are being constantly moved about. One week they are in one place, and the next one in another at the other end of the country. Nobody even knows, except the members, where to put their fingers on the Mafia. In each town there is a kind of chief agent, who is kept posted with the doings and movements of headquarters, and he communicates them to those of the members who are concerned.

Science of Ticklishness.

The average man who squirms when he is prodded under the ribs by some "villainous acquaintance," who does not usually stop to philosophize over the phenomenon, He either contents himself with the purely involuntary twitch which it is the purpose of his tormentor to produce, or he promptly applies the punishment to the crime. He no more thinks of stopping to consider the why and wherefore than does the child who writes and pricks his neighbor with a pin, and passing the time of his punishment, he promptly applies the punishment to the crime.
